The presentation of my display is clear and eye-catching.	My display is quite jumbled. Headings, images and text are not clear. I haven't put much effort into making it attractive.	Some elements of my display are not in order and are not clear. I have made some effort to make it eye-catching.	Most of the elements of my display are logically laid out and easy to read. I have made quite an effort to make it attractive.	All of the elements of my display are logically laid out and easy to read. My display is very eye-catching.
My information is well researched & my sources are shown.	I didn't do any research for the display, OR I have no record of where I got my information.	I researched some information and kept a record of some of my sources.	I researched most of my information and kept a record of most of my sources.	I thoroughly researched all of my information and kept a complete record of my sources.
My Indonesian was correct.	I spelt many words wrongly and I had many words in the wrong order.	Some of my spelling and word order was correct. But I still had more than three mistakes.	Most of my spelling and word order was correct. I only had one or two mistakes.	All my words were spelt correctly and the word order was correct.
My display included all required elements.	My display is incomplete – I left out lots of the parts.	My display has more than three parts missing.	My display is almost complete. I missed one or two parts.	My display is complete. I have included all of the required parts.

If students orally presented their display to the class:

I presented in a loud, clear voice with few errors.	I mumbled as I spoke and mispronounced many words. My presentation was very disjointed.	I mumbled a bit and I pronounced some words wrong and it wasn't very fluent.	I could be easily heard but I mispronounced one or two words. I didn't read with much expression.	No worries! I read fluently and with expression, and my pronunciation was good.
